

Porcelain Dessert Plate "Little Boy on a Horse", Baranovka Porcelain Factory, 1973-1980s.

Measures 8" in diameter. Shows a young boy happily playing at being a Civil War era Red Army cavalryman (a favorite motif of Soviet ceramicists was young children playing Civil War era soldiers). The reverse has the Baranovka Porcelain factory trademark /fig. #47 in Volume One of "Marks on Soviet Porcelain, Faience, and Majolica, 1917-1991 by Nasonova et al"/.

Very good condition with nicely preserved gold edging. There is a tiny dimple on the surface of the rim at four o'clock, a minor, virtually unnoticeable mark that was present on the plate before it was fired and is not the result of subsequent damage?

Please note, medal in our photo is for size reference.
