

St George Cross for Bravery, 3rd class, #165345, circa early to mid-1917.

In silver, measures 41.0 mm in height (incl. eyelet), 34.2 mm in width; weighs 10.7 g.

In excellent condition. The details of the cypher and lettering are well-preserved and crisp, show only very minimal wear to the high points. There are some tiny contact marks, mostly to the raised edge around the medallion on the obverse and on the reverse that are visible under 10x magnification but practically invisible to the naked eye. The cross is completely free of nicks, edge knocks or other significant condition issues. Very attractive even toning to the silver throughout.

This St. George Cross is from a serial number range on which the recipient data has not yet been found in the Russian archives, but it certainly has a great research potential - especially since it is the relatively uncommon third class!
