

Cigarette Case Hunters at Rest, circa 1950s-60s.

In nickel-plated steel, measures approx. 105 x 83 x 18 mm. The artwork is a finely detailed 3D bas-relief image off Vasily Perov's famous 1871 painting, currently on permanent exhibit in the State Tretyakov Gallery in Moscow. The reverse features a humorous scene where two partridges appear to be debating whether they have anything to fear from the three hunters. The manufacturer's graphic logo is in the center of the latch spring.

In very good condition. The nickel plating is mostly intact, partially worn off at high points of the artwork and along the edges. There are no significant dents, dings or scratches anywhere. The hinge is straight and tight, so the halves match completely when closed. The latch is in perfect working order and requires just the right amount of pressure. The spring of the latch has a couple of microscopic oxidation spots which have no effect on its function or looks. The inside surface of the metal shows mild pitting and small oxidation spots.

Please note that the penny in our last photo is for size reference.
