

"Stasi Decorations and Memorabilia, VOLUME 3", Ralph Pickard.

C. 2018, English language text, 318 pages, fully illustrated in color, BIG 11" x 8.5" format Hardcover with dust jacket.

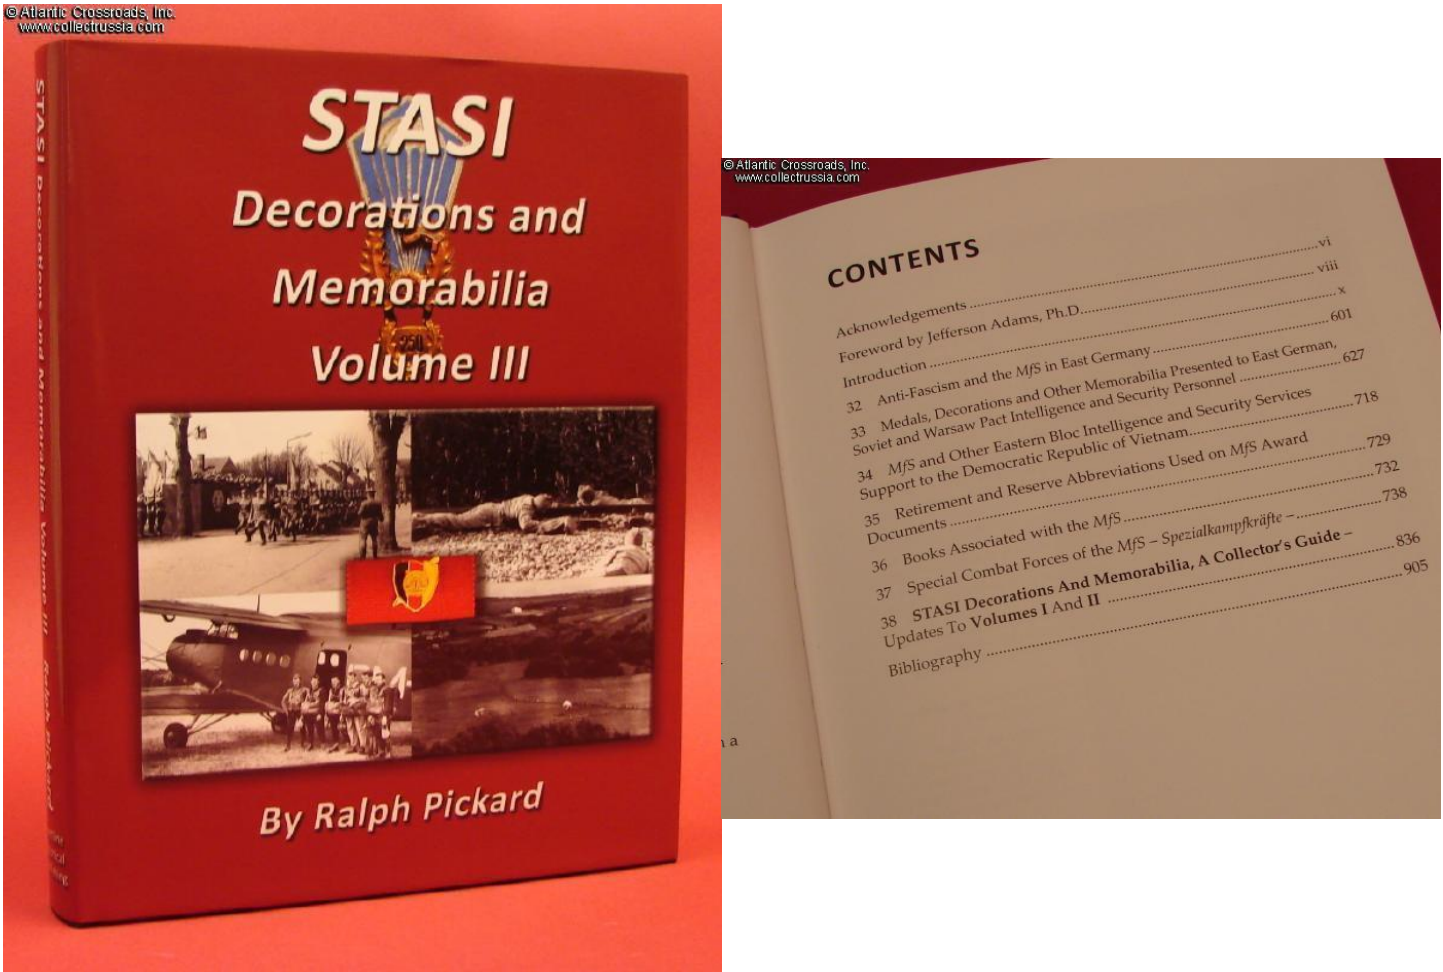

This is the much awaited third volume of the extremely popular Stasi collector's guide series of books by Pickard. It is hard to imagine, but Volume III is even better illustrated than the previous two. All three volumes together include over 900 pages with over 1700 illustrations!

The book delves ever further into the fascinating subject of DDR notorious secret police and its memorabilia. The book shows a number of Stasi documents, badges, and non-portable awards that did not appear in the previous books. Moreover, the third volume of Pickard's work provides a far more detailed history of MfS (STASI) and focuses on its cooperation with KGB and State Security of other Eastern Bloc countries. Consequently, widely represented in this massive volume are groups of medals and decorations issued to state security officers of Warsaw Pact that include DDR awards - accompanied by detailed identification of the awards and in many cases, explanation of their significance. Photos of German and foreign documents are likewise accompanied by detailed description and in some cases, full English translation of the text. To even greater extent than the previous volumes, the book is richly illustrated by period photographs of Warsaw Pact intelligence officers. Some of these photos are truly exceptional, for example those showing parachute training of MfS special operations units.

A result of years of painstaking research, this book is truly a gift to the collecting community and Cold War historians alike. With only 750 copies in print, this book may soon be out of print and become a scarce collectible in its own right!

ANTI-FASCISM AND THE MFS IN EAST GERMANY

ANTI-FA MFS IN EAST GERM

Following World War II, the role of the anti-fascist movement in the struggle against National Socialism was celebrated, especially when members of the movement were later expanded to include the Communist Party – Spätkämpfer – as well as partisan fighters of the International Brigade in the Spanish Civil War – Spanienkämpfer – as well as the members of the Volkskämpfer who fought in the Spanish Civil War (1936-1939) and the Volkskämpfer who fought against the Nazis during World War II.

Even though only a very small percentage of the East German population included the members of the International Brigade in the Spanish Civil War, the fighters, who struggled against the Nazis during World War II.

Throughout the early periods of the Cold War, the East German government made a concerted effort to keep former Nazi Party members from any civilian, military or government positions of consequence. By 1950, more than 12,000 individuals had been sentenced to prison, and a few were even executed for their Nazi past (war criminals).

During the Cold War, there was an emphasis on educating the East German population on the accomplishments of the anti-fascist fight and medals, badges and other memorabilia were presented to those who assisted in the effort to educate the general public about the Holocaust and the role of anti-fascist fighters such as Ernst Thälmann.

These anti-fascism committees were all part of the Verbindung der Antifaschisten (abbreviated as KdAW and translated as Verbindung (created in 1953 after the Verbindung of Victims of the Verjährungs (VVN) was dissolved by the leadership of the Nazi Regime) des Einheitspartei Deutschlands (SEPD - Socialist Unity Party of Germany)). The VVN had been created in 1947 and lost its members were already part of the Kommunistische Partei Deutschlands (KPD - Communist Party of Germany). Since the original assembly, the Kommunistische Partei Deutschlands and West Germany, the communist Party in both East and West Germany, the East German leadership viewed it with suspicion and as a launching pad for western spy operations. The integration of the members of the East German region and the VVN into the KdAW allowed the East German government greater control of antifascist activities within the ban of the German branch.

STASI Decorations and Memorabilia. Bob, thank you very much. I am appreciative of all your work and support for this

I also want to thank other friends and fellow collectors for your continued support and discussions over the years. It is much appreciated.

Lastly, I want to personally thank a very close friend, the late Ambassador Hugh Montgomery from Virginia, for his support and assistance in this endeavor, and the encouragement he provided over many years. Sadly, he passed away in May 2017. Thanks, my friend, you will be missed but never forgotten.

Medal and Award Document for the 30th Anniversary of Victory in the Great Patriotic War. The medal was established in 1975.

As with the other Soviet 30th Anniversary of Victory medals and award documents illustrated in both Volumes I and II of STASI Decorations and Memorabilia, this medal and award document is extremely rare. Only a little more than 5,000 of these medals were presented to foreigners, compared to the more than 14 million 30th Anniversary Medals awarded to combat veterans and labor front veterans.

Of interest, is the fact that foreigners were also awarded the combat veteran version of the 30th Anniversary of Victory in the Great Patriotic War Medal. There are examples of the combat veteran medal presented to MJB officers in both Volume I (Figure 154) and Volume II (Figure 303) of STASI Decorations and Memorabilia.

Other examples of the Soviet Order of the Red Star presented to non-Soviet citizens (foreigners) can be found in Volumes I and II of STASI Decorations and Memorabilia in Figures 156, 316, 317 and 318.

The backing of this Order of the Red Star was converted from a screw-back to a pin-back mount. The Hungarian certificate reads that Colonel Markus was awarded the Order of the Red Star by the Presidium of the USSR Supreme Council in 1970.

Figure 855 This badge and award booklet were awarded to Colonel István Agócs in 1970. The document has a facsimile signature of KGB Chairman Yuri Andropov.

The engraving on the dagger grip reads: "To István Agócs from the Ministry of the Interior of the Hungarian Republic - 10 X (October 1988) The hall- and room marks of the Hungarian State Mint in Budapest are stamped on the scabbard. It is unknown how much, if any, previous medal owners may be in the dagger."

Note that the serial number seen in the Merit Medal Award Document in Figure 867 was entered by hand. In many cases, the award documents from this time period did not reflect hand-entered serial numbers, even though the medal itself may have had it stamped on its reverse. For more information, refer to the illustrations in STASI Decorations and Memorabilia, Volume II, pages 581 through 584.

The very top of the reverse of the Merit Medal has the stamped serial number 00873, which matches the handwritten serial number in the award document in Figure 867.

The medals in Figure 868 are the Polish Medal of Victory and Freedom – 1945 and the East German Merit Medal of the National People's Army in Bronze. Of interest, both foreign awards were mounted together by Matvienko on a Soviet medal mount.

The dark-colored Fallschirmjäger beret worn in some of the photographs shown in this chapter is not officially worn in public settings, because the Reconnaissance Company was a secret unit within the Wachregiment Feliks Dzierzynski. Without the Fallschirmjäger beret, the only other distinction is that a soldier was from an airborne or special operations unit within the MFS was the DD (Dachverband) Badge worn on the tunic.
