

MVD Internal Army officer full dress belt, circa 1970s-80s.

In yellow artificial silk, woven to simulate gold brocade. The colored threads making a wide stripe along the middle of the belt make it distinctly different from the full-dress belts used by the Soviet Army. The brass buckle is the same as on the Army or Air Force belt, showing a Soviet star with the hammer and sickle emblem. The liner has a poorly stamped maker mark which is only partly legible. Will fit up to a 38" waist when fully extended to the maximum allowed by its grommets, this belt is easily adjustable to a smaller size.

In excellent condition. The fabric is perfectly clean on both sides and has only a couple of very minor snags, no tears or significant wear of any kind. The brass buckle is still bright showing only a minor amount of tarnish that does not detract.

This type of belt is much more scarce than the dress belts for Soviet army / air force officers.
