

Storming the Winter Palace, High-3D Bas-Relief Wall Plaque, circa 1970s-80s.

In resin with silver-colored finish accented by darker tarnish in the recessed areas, measures approx. 8" across, weighs close to 1 lb. Comes with the original loop for wall mounting. The reverse is protected by a hard plastic cover. The artwork is cast in multilayered high-3D bas-relief, depicting a symbolic scene of the historic moment when the Bolshevik insurgents attacked the Winter Palace in Petrograd. This assault was the beginning of the October 1917 armed revolt which the Bolsheviks later crowned with the grand title "The Great October Socialist Revolution". The very revolution that gave birth to Soviet Russia, the Civil War, Red Terror, famines, and the Soviet Union in all its socialist glory. The lettering under the artwork reads "Storming the Winter Palace".

In excellent, outstanding condition. Very attractive tarnish in the recessed areas accents the high relief of the artwork which is cast with amazing attention to minutest details, be it the faces and clothes of the attackers or the architectural embellishments of the Alexandrian Column and the buildings surrounding the Palace Square. The protective plastic on the reverse has a missing piece which allows to see that the artwork is reinforced with epoxy resin.

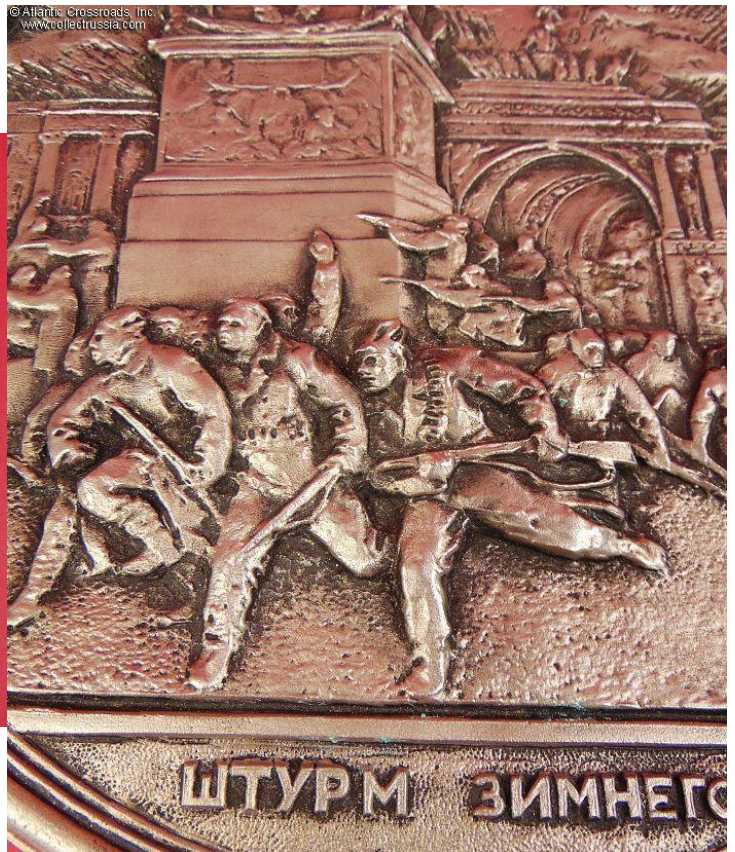

Overall, a very unusual and highly artistic display piece for a collection of Soviet memorabilia and presentational art.

Please note that the medal in our last photo is for size reference.

Item# 44157

$90.00

© Atlantic Crossroads, Inc.
www.collectrussia.com

© Atlanti Crossroads, Inc.
www.collectrussia.com

© Atlanti Crossroads, Inc.
www.collectrussia.com

© Atlanti Crossroads, Inc.
www.collectrussia.com

© Atlanti Crossroads, Inc.
www.collectrussia.com

© Atlanti Crossroads, Inc.
www.collectrussia.com

